Important Safety Notice: Keep Lithium Coin Cell Batteries Out of Reach of Children

Lithium coin cell batteries pose a serious hazard if swallowed by children, leading to severe injury or even death. Always store these batteries in a secure location, out of reach and sight of children. Ensure that battery compartments in devices are securely closed and inaccessible to young children.

Warning: Safe Disposal of Lithium Coin Cell Batteries

Lithium coin cell batteries must be disposed of properly to prevent environmental harm and safety risks:

Do Not Throw in Trash: Do not dispose of lithium coin cell batteries in regular household trash. They can leak harmful chemicals or cause fires if damaged.

Recycle Properly: Take used batteries to a designated recycling facility or a collection point, often found at electronics stores or community recycling centers.

Avoid Damage: Do not crush, puncture, or disassemble batteries, as this can release toxic materials and create a fire hazard.

Store Safely: Before disposal, store batteries in a cool, dry place, out of reach of children and pets. Tape the terminals to prevent short-circuiting.

By following these steps, you help protect the environment and ensure safety.

Lithium Manganese Dioxide (CR) coin cell batteries provide reliable performance and a long shelf life. With a 3V operating voltage and the ability to function across a wide temperature range, they are ideal for digital watches, car remotes, and certain medical devices. Maxell's 5-piece strip CR coin cells offer a 10-year shelf life.

Ever since the European battery regulations were revised to prohibit the used of 5ppm or more mercury in batteries, Maxell has been committed to developing Silver-Oxide cells which do not use anti-corrosive material such as mercury and lead.

The most common application for Silver Oxide cells are in wrist watches. In order to differentiate between Mercury free Silver Oxide and other brand Silver Oxide, Maxell introduced Mercury Free logo. The batteries are stamped with a “Hg 0%” registered logo to clearly show the difference.

Today, Maxell are proud to share 40 SR battery models made in Japan that are suitable for most of the world's wrist watches. An additional benefit is the batteries feature a 5 year warranty for extra peace of mind.
